The Danish food cluster has a unique position of strength and is one of the strongest in the world. On dining tables around the world you will find milk, meat, vegetables and other food products from Denmark and this is due to the fact that the Danish food cluster supplies quality, food safety, resource efficiency and sustainability to the consumers. In case the specific products are not of Danish origin they might have been produced by means of Danish technology or contain Danish ingredients for the food industry.

Throughout the entire value chain we are working on producing more using less raw material; minimize food waste and use big data to automate and digitize product development and innovation. The agricultural sector already today uses satellites and robots to obtain a more exact picture of where to fertilize, and where not to.

To maintain this unique position of strength in future, it is decisive that the business can attract talents and highly skilled employees to the many interesting jobs within the food industry – Denmark's perhaps most international line of business. A line of business which offers a most interesting and fascinating career.

Want to know wing more? Join the "Talent Day" in the food cluster! Interesting presentations as well as the opportunity to meet a number of strong and powerful companies. We expect you to study at either at a university, a university college, a business academy, maybe you have graduated recently or? Most importantly - you see a career opportunity in the food cluster.
