Japan studies, China and Russian studies participated in the project. All ”fagrepræsentanter” and students were asked to evaluate. All in all, the evaluation showed that the app in the long run did not have a great effect. During the 1st semester, it did make it easier to make study groups and was a good help in the beginning for students to get to know new people. However, in the 2nd semester more groups were split and it did not function very well. China Studies: the teachers that used the app thought it was a great tool in the forming of study groups during the commencement of studies. The students thought that the questionnaire should be more specific in regards to strengths and weaknesses. Russian Studies: the teachers also thought it was a great administrative tool during commencement of studies rather than the following semester. The picture in Japan Studies was also mixed. US announced that the evaluation will be a useful background information for taking decisions about the further use of the app in future .
